

Welcome To Portland Jewelry Academy

I started my career as a professional bench jeweler with determination, passion and very little help. Through hard work, a lot of learning, and a lot of failures I succeeded to become a master jeweler, first matching my peers and then surpassing them.

It is a journey, not a destination, to make jewelry that is truly inspiring and of the highest quality. I am here to help you on that journey by giving you the tools to avoid the pitfalls, learn from successes and mistakes so you too can build a distinguished career.

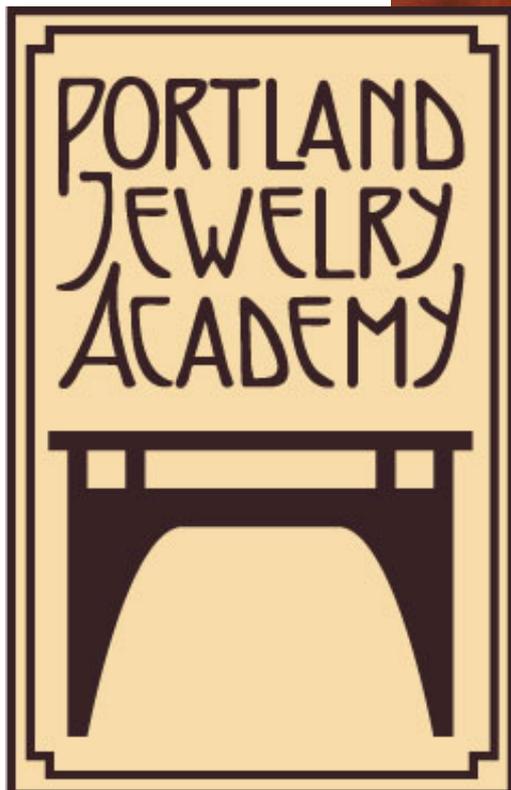

The program you are starting is designed to give the best possible foundation to build your skills. Using solid techniques, problem solving and discipline, you too, may become a master.

I am excited to share this journey with you. It is a fun and rewarding path that few other careers can match.

Please take some time to explore this catalog and get ready for a life changing adventure.

The absence of an accreditation, within the jewelry industry, requires potential employers to commonly use a three step system when hiring bench jewelers.

- 1) Review applications / resume submitted for bench job.
- 2) Conduct one on one interviews based off of education, skills, and employment history on application / resume.
- 3) Applicants that proceed past the interview are given a "Bench Test" in which the applicant is required to complete a skills test of abilities documented in resume.

Portland Jewelry Academy provides education for entry level employment within the jewelry industry. Portland Jewelry Academy does not place students or guarantee employment. All students and alumni of Portland Jewelry Academy can join the Facebook group "Portland Jewelry Academy Alumni". Employment opportunities are posted to

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 U.S.C. § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99) is a Federal law that protects the privacy of student education records. The law applies to all schools that receive funds under an applicable program of the U.S. Department of Education.

FERPA gives parents certain rights with respect to their children's education records. These rights transfer to the student when he or she reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level. Students to whom the rights have transferred are "eligible students."

Parents or eligible students have the right to inspect and review the student's education records maintained by the school. Schools are not required to provide copies of records unless, for reasons such as great distance, it is impossible for parents or eligible students to review the records. Schools may charge a fee for copies.

Parents or eligible students have the right to request that a school correct records which they believe to be inaccurate or misleading. If the school decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student then has the right to a formal hearing. After the hearing, if the school still decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student has the right to place a statement with the record setting forth his or her view about the contested information.

Generally, schools must have written permission from the parent or eligible student in order to release any information from a student's education record. However, FERPA allows schools to disclose those records, without consent, to the following parties or under the following conditions (34 CFR § 99.31):

- School officials with legitimate educational interest;
- Other schools to which a student is transferring;
- Specified officials for audit or evaluation purposes;
- Appropriate parties in connection with financial aid to a student;
- Organizations conducting certain studies for or on behalf of the school;
- Accrediting organizations;
- To comply with a judicial order or lawfully issued subpoena;
- Appropriate officials in cases of health and safety emergencies; and
- State and local authorities, within a juvenile justice system, pursuant to specific State law.

Schools may disclose, without consent, "directory" information such as a student's name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, honors and awards, and dates of attendance. However, schools must tell parents and eligible students about directory information and allow parents and eligible students a reasonable amount of time to request that the school not disclose directory information about them. Schools must notify parents and eligible students annually of their rights under FERPA. The actual means of notification (special letter, inclusion in a PTA bulletin, student handbook, or newspaper article) is left to the discretion of each school.
